

Specialist Insight Series: The Changing Landscape of Family Law Advocacy

10 December 2020, 21 January 2021, 25 March 2021
Webinar

Overview

With an increasing spotlight on appropriate dispute resolution and adopting resolution of family matters through the lens of therapeutic justice, traditional advocacy as we know it and practised it in the past is changing.

In its traditional form, one thinks of advocacy as arguing and presenting your client's case in court and only persuading the judge. However, in family matters, advocacy begins when you first meet your client and takes the form of understanding your client's case and concerns, and also persuading your client to take a constructive and reasonable approach which may yield an outcome for parties, not necessarily through the litigation route.

The Singapore Academy of Law (SAL) Professional Affairs Committee's (PAC) Family Law and Children's Rights Chapter (FLCRC) is proud to present these three webinars focussed on the right approach to advocacy in family law disputes.

She started practice in the area of civil litigation and upon the founding of Bih Li & Lee LLP more than twenty years ago, specialised in family law. Her practice involves many aspects of family law ranging from contentious custody matters of the most challenging types to seemingly congenial cases of lives saved by "simple" adoption matters. Besides being an advocate for parties involved in family matters, Wai Mooi is also a Mediator and a Child Representative. All of these require interactions with clients and for them, with Judges, fellow lawyers and persons who choose to represent themselves (often called "Litigants in Person").
