Overview

Clean Energy Transition

In recent years, we have seen big structural changes in the commodities and energy sectors. There has been an emerging bulwark in the clean energy transition to renewables. 2021 looks set to be a year of further stimulus to that transition, given:

1. President Biden's $2 trillion Clean Power Plan to supercharge the push into clean energy investments.
2. The drive towards nuclear energy in the Middle East, China, India, Japan, Korea and other nations after a temporary hiatus since the Fukushima accident in 2011.
3. Taiwan becoming a hub for commercial offshore wind, and China being the world leader in wind power and aiming to power c.290 million homes by 2030.
4. Laos has tapped strongly into hydropower, and the Philippines into geothermal sources.
5. The Australia-ASEAN Power Link project developing the world's largest solar farm worth 16 billion dollars. The large-scale floating solar platform project in Tengah Reservoir in Singapore.
6. Even the oil majors are investing significantly into cleaner sources of energy.

Wind, Solar, Geothermal, Nuclear – these appear to be the new catchphrases in this new century. But what useful lessons can we draw from past experiences that can be applied to these evolving areas, and what shadows lurk beneath the surface? Perhaps more pertinently, what is the role of lawyers and in-house counsel - managers and mitigators of legal risk whose job is to support this push and help resolve disputes that will inevitably arise?

International Trade In Commodities (Oil & Gas)

Globalisation and the intertwining of economies have led to a substantial increase in cross-border commodity trading. At the same time, the COVID-19 pandemic seems to have shifted the focus of legal issues in the commodity world. Commodities trading law is always evolving, rapidly-changing and often complex. Hence, in addition to specialised legal knowledge, lawyers require specialised industry knowledge, skills and experience in handling and addressing legal and dispute issues in the day-to-day business activities of trading houses. With increasing reports of compliance lapses in commodities trading, one of the ways to protect business owners is to be aware of the potential legal issues in any spectrum of the value chain and to find solutions to that. In this segment, we will focus on the commonly-faced legal issues and disputes in commodity trading, how we can avoid the pitfalls that may occur and how to minimise the risk of dispute. Areas touched on will include "battle of the forms", termination, force majeure, sanctions, bankers' letter of credit, quantity and quality claims and timing.

Programme Outline

On 9 March 2021, join our speakers and panelists who will be sharing their views, from the user's perspective, on the breadth of issues covered in this event.

This webinar serves both as a primer for younger lawyers who are looking at being part of the evolving renewables space; as well as provides a useful perspective for lawyers and in-house counsel who are in the oil and gas, commodities or energy sectors who will find the discussion pertinent to their roles.

Speakers

Mr Kelvin Teo
Director, Drew & Napier LLC

Kelvin is a specialist in resolving complex energy and resource, and infrastructure disputes. He is proficient at making complicated technical, delay and quantum issues easy to understand.

Kelvin advises major players in the infrastructure, energy and resources sphere. He has acted for parties and projects in Korea, China, the Middle East, Mongolia, Italy, Laos, Philippines, Indonesia, Malaysia, Thailand, Vietnam, US, Italy, India and Singapore, amongst others. His sector experience covers infrastructure projects from nuclear power plants and renewables including wind, hydropower and geothermal; to refineries, mines, railways and expressways; and even giant Ferris wheels.

Kelvin carries out his own advocacy across the entire spectrum of dispute resolution mechanisms - litigation, arbitration, mediation, dispute board proceedings as well as adjudications, seated both within and out of Singapore. He has been recognized in directories such as The Legal 500, Experts Guide, and SBR's list of most influential lawyers under 40 (2018).

Ms Rebecca Andersen
Head of Legal, Hengyi Industrial International Pte. Ltd.

Rebecca is the Head of Legal of Hengyi Industries International Pte. Ltd., a Singapore oil and gas commodity trading company with a world class refinery plant in Brunei. She advises on complex issues in the business of commodities trading and she is known to be able to provide legal and business solutions. Her focus areas include international trade, cross-border disputes, sanctions, shipping, trade financing and derivatives. She has extensive experience in contentious dispute issues.

Rebecca started her career practising as a litigation and corporate lawyer with the Global Ernst & Young Law and thereafter became a corporate lawyer in the Energy, Maritime and International Commodity Trading industry for many years till present. Rebecca has since been the General Counsel in a United States listed company and various public-listed companies in Hong Kong, Singapore and Malaysia.

Rebecca sits as a Director in the board of one of the companies under the Hengyi Group. She is also a Director of the Singapore Corporate Counsel Association Limited. She is a Council Member of the Singapore Institute of Arbitrators (SIArb) and she is on the arbitration panels of SIAC (Reserve Panel), AIAC and AIADR. The ICC had recently appointed her to be in the ICC Taskforce on ADR and Arbitration.

Rebecca is a regular speaker at events as presenter, chair, emcee and panelist.

Panelists

Mr Ivan Tan

Director, Trade and Business Services, Enterprise Singapore

Ivan Tan is the Director of Trade and Business Services Division with Enterprise Singapore (ESG), the government agency championing enterprise development. His division is responsible for promoting Singapore as a trading hub and helping Singapore-based companies in the wholesale trade and business services sector to grow and internationalize.

Ivan joined IE Singapore, the predecessor government agency to ESG, in 2006. Prior to his current appointment, Ivan was the Global Market Director for Southeast Asia from April 2015 to December 2018. From 2013 to 2015, Ivan was seconded to the Energy Market Authority (EMA) as its Director of Planning.

Mr Matthew Buchanan

Partner, Clifford Chance Pte Ltd

Matt is a partner in the Worldwide Projects Group at Clifford Chance and Head of the Construction practice in Asia Pacific. He specializes in construction and broader commercial contract aspects of infrastructure projects including in the power (renewable and conventional), oil and gas, and infrastructure sectors. Matt acts for lenders, sponsors and contractors in relation to the full suite of documentation, from complex "first of kind" turnkey arrangements through to EPCM, CM, subcontracting structures, technical services agreements and relevant security documentation.

He is based in Singapore and has also practiced in China, London and Sydney.

Panelists

Mr Mark Tudor

Regional Counsel, BW Offshore Singapore Pte Ltd

Mark is Regional Counsel at BW Offshore, a company which provides floating production services to the oil and gas industry.

He has been advising on international energy and infrastructure projects for over 22 years. He began his career as a corporate energy lawyer at an international law firm in London and subsequently worked for 13 years in Tokyo in the Energy and Projects team of Hebert Smith and for 6 years in Singapore.

Prior to moving back to Singapore in 2019, Mark was a partner and Head of Energy and Natural Resources at Nishimura & Asahi (the largest Japanese law firm).

Ms Maureen Poh

Director, Helmsman LLC

Maureen's practice spans the spectrum of shipping and commodity trading work, from charterparty, bill of lading and cargo disputes to commodity sale and purchase matters. She has particular expertise in energy-related commodity matters, such as the sale and purchase and the transportation of crude oil, oil and petroleum products, LPG and LNG.

Qualified to practise law in Singapore, and England and Wales, Maureen sits on the Advisory Board of the Centre for Maritime Law at the National University of Singapore.

Maureen is lauded by Legal500 as "a key name for charterparty disputes, carriage of goods by sea and cargo claims", and complimented for being "proactive, clear and fast in analysing specific points".
